Congressional Sales Office, 2003. OCLC Number: (OCoLC)52733271 Subject: Border patrols -- United States. Excerpt: . . . 11 Customs employs a systematic process based on the principles of risk management. This process involves data collection and analy-sis, combined with years of experience and old fashioned intuition as our personnel identify trends and anomalies in data to make in-formed risk-based decisions on what to screen, target and, when appropriate, examine. Since September 11th the Customs Service has been operating at our highest level of vigilance. Inspectors manning Americas front line have been staffing land border ports of entry around the clock, performing increased enforcement screenings, examinations and se-curity operations. Officers at our ports of entry are working 12 to 16 hours a day, 6 and 7 days a week, and they have been doing so for over 6 months. Since last September the rules have changed. Customs can no longer be satisfied with conducting examinations solely at the port of entry. We must begin to view the border as more than a mere physical boundary between countries. We must also under-stand it in terms of the actions we undertake with our foreign part-ners to prescreen people and goods before they arrive in the United States. To better address the threat that terrorists could exploit commer-cial trade, Customs has developed a Container Security Initiative. We call it CSI, which is designed to improve our border security and efficiency by pushing our enforcement efforts beyond our bor-ders. SI C will allow U. S. Customs more time to anticipate, identify and stop threats before they reach our...
