Excerpt from The Married Woman, Vol. 1 of 3: A Play in Three Parts This is the drawing-room of William and Jane Temple, appointed in the style of thirty years ago, and somewhat worn. The well-dressed woman of twenty-seven with nicely cut features, who stands peering into the adjoining room through the crack of the door at your right is Alice - Mrs. Henry Matthewson. The woman of fifty who comes ominously from the hall through the opening directly facing you is Jane Temple. Mrs. Temple. Is she crying about it? Alice [with a shrug]. No! Mrs. Temple. Georges one reason for not leaving this house for ever is that he can't find his hat! [She exhibits an opera hat concealed by a copy of The Lady. Alice. Mother! You are hiding George's hat? Mrs. Temple. Shall we have Sylvia jilt this boy at the church door? Have him marry some other girl, out of pique, within six weeks, and make us all ridiculous? Alice, we must get her through the next eighteen hours somehow!...]

Reviews

A brand new e book with a brand new standpoint. I have read through and that i am certain that i am going to gonna go through again once more in the future. Its been developed in an remarkably simple way in fact it is merely right after i finished reading through this book in which basically modified me, modify the way in my opinion.

Thorough manual for pdf lovers. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.
