Excerpt from An Address Delivered Before the Philoclean and Peithessopian Societies of Rutgers College The active members of the Literary Societies, be fore which I am called to appear on this occasion, are young men. Some of these are now about to be dismissed from the protection of the College with which they have here been connected - from the care and nurture of their excellent mother with her blessing and her honors. Others of their number will follow in succession in due time. Life - that life for which what has here been attempted has been the beginning of preparation - is before them life in society - active life - manly life - life to prove the value of the instruction they have received, and to try the strength of their principles. It is to such persons then that I am to address myself at this time. I come to you, my friends, with a message from that stirring world into which you are about to enter; and I shall aim to deliver it with...
