The New England Certificate Board has shown by seventeen years of experience that a policy of renewing the certificate privilege absolutely on the basis of the work done in college by the product of the school in question will eventually place the certificate on a par with examinations for reliability. Reduction in the number of conditions allowed on admission would help to solve the problem. The allowance is generally about two units, though some colleges admit with three or even more units of condition, and even advertise the fact. If there is to be a higher standard of admission, it would be reasonable to give the preference to those pupils who have completed the full requirements over those who are short half a year or more in preparation, and...
