It lies between two hills, called East and West Hill. East Hill is least built on. There are many Buildings on the West Hill. The cliff on the West Hill gradually. decreases in height, till it descends to the shore in a steep slope, on which the new buildings have extended themselves. Westward of these is the Parish of St. Andrew, in which the Gas Works of Parishes: the Town stand, but in the whole of which there are only three inhabited Houses; St. Andrew, and beyond it, the Parish of the Holy Trinity, which is chiefly low meadow land. In that part of the last named Parish which adjoins the Sea, is a considerable number of small Dwellings and Workshops: these are built on derelict land, and were seised, about three years ago, into the hands of the Crown; the Tenants have since had seven years leases granted to them, with the understanding that they will not be renewed. With these Buildings the Town of Hastings terminates on this side. Passing St. Michael s, still Westward, we come to the Extra-parochial ground, St. Michael's, otherwise called the White Rock. At the back of this, the Road to St. Leonard passes along the Sea-side, skirting the Parish of St. Mary Magdalen (which is st. Mary Mag. nearly a mile long and broad, and entirely agricultural,) till we reach the dalen. farther extremity of it; where, near...
