Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from St. Andrew s College Review, Christmas 1902 The Canadian game of Rugby, as played at present, has degenerated into a contest in which mere brute force is the chief factor. That there is something radically wrong in the rules governing the game this year is shown by the utter lack of open play in the great majority of games. Continued bucking, with an occasional run around the end, seems to be the usual method of play adopted. When playing with the wind, of course, the half line punts and the wings follow up as quickly as possible. If they are fast enough they can often down their man for a good gain, otherwise the ball is simply returned. After many of the scrimmages the ball is handled only by the quarter-back, and is completely lost to the view of the spectators. Then again people have become tired of going to see a game, which, on the wing line, is nothing better than a slugging match. The senior series of the O.R.F.U. practically passed out of existence, for this year, at any rate. It is universally recognized by all those connected with football, that some radical changes must be made, if Canadian rugby is to become interesting for spectators and for players. Much has been accomplished by the Burnside rules. In them is combined the best points of both the American and British games, coupled with some Canadian ideas. They aim at making the play as open as possible. The scrimmage is altogether done away with, the snap-back being used in its place. The wings are forced to keep a certain distance from each other, thus...
